A report out today claims Microsoft will be moving full-time from a company that mostly develops hardware to a company that primarily develops software. Word of the report emerged during a meeting, according to a source with knowledge of the plans, who notes that the news is "not official," and that Microsoft's board of directors is responsible for approving any such move. The source didn't have more to share with us. Microsoft has been working on an "Xbox-first" strategy for some time. It has said that Windows and apps will be available to its Xbox One console, and that the Xbox will put a spotlight on Microsoft's own games rather than relying solely on those made by partners.Q: CK Editor showing error error in input I am using ckeditor for my website. Sometimes I got a error which is "Error in input" How to fix this error? A: There are different fixes for this issue in different versions of CKeditor, mostly you can find the solutions from the following questions: CKEditor with CKeditor Error: ""Error in input" rendered in IE8 "Error in input" rendered in IE7 when using CKEditor ckeditor for ckeditor error in input Hope this helps. Q: how to make live-search using regexp in rails? I just started programming in Rails and am working on a simple search functionality. The idea is that I want to display only the records which matches the regex in the search field. I did the following: "%search%" is the attribute and searchable is true in the model true do %> At the server I have a simple js function like this: $("#search").live("keyup", function() { var search = $("#search").val(); $.post("/search/", {search : search}, function(data) { $("#example").html(data); }); }); The problem is that even if I press the backspace or delete I can't get the right records to be displayed as the search is matching every one of them
